WIGGINS AND THE THREE FISHERS.

Three fishers went reeling out into the West
To watch for the storm as the sun went
down;
Each muttered the oath that pleased him best,
And swore that Wiggins was fit to drown,
"For men can't work, though women may
weep,
While Wiggins and Fate and the Tempest
sleep
And we'd like to keelhaul Wiggins!"

Three fishwives sat up in the light-house
tower,
Nursing their wrath as the sun went down;
Each vowed that Wiggins had stolen her
dower,
Or pawned her furniture through the town.
"For idlers will drink, though their women
weep,
And the sooner its over the sooner to sleep;
But we'd like to parboil Wiggins!"

Three wet grocers sat and counted their gains
And their empty kegs, as the sun went
down—
They had got all the boats and net and chains,
And every bedstead there was in town.
Said one: "Let's divvy with Wiggins—I think
We hed ought ter pay him—in cradles or drink—
• But good-by to the bar till mornin'."

A TERRIBLE GHOST STORY.

BY AN OLD FARMER.

I am an old farmer, living in the oldest house in Oldtown.
The only thing new upon the place is my
well.
We have an ancient well, but no one ever tastes the water there, though it is as cold and clear as crystal.
I suppose the place is worth a great deal.
It was valued at twenty thousand dollars when I bought it years ago.
The house is a handsome mansion—the sort of a place a gentleman retiring from business usually buys to end his days in,
and city people come to see it and the grounds, and seem to be delighted.
Now, when I tell you that I came into Oldtown with exactly six hundred dollars
in my pocket, and that I had no idea what I should do when that was spent, you will feel surprised that, six months after,
I owned this place.
But I'll tell you all about it.
It was what folks call a haunted place,
and for ten years it had stood vacant.
People tried to live there, but were always frightened away.
If it had been only the house, that could have been torn down; but nobody could ever farm the land.
Twelve years before this, the proprietor had been a jealous old gentleman, who had a young wife, whom he would never permit out of his sight if he could avoid it.
However, she was as sly as he was watchful, and she managed to flirt sufficiently to make herself talked about.
Being very pretty, two silly young fellows fell in love with her, and one used to follow her about making eyes and singing dreadfully, like a lover in a play.
The post-mistress said he wrote to her—
and I suppose he did.
And at last the news spread through the place that she had run away with him.
He was gone, and she was gone; and the old man came one morning to Lawyer Tantivy, and sold his property, at a great loss, to a man who had wanted it for years
—a rich man, who liked to have it said that he owned the finest place in Oldtown.
It was plain that the poor old gentleman did not care what became of himself; and when he had got the money he wandered away, and was never seen again.
The new proprietor moved up to the great house in state; but at dawn the whole family—servants and all—returned to their old quarters.
What they had seen, or what they had not seen, it was hard to tell, but they were all nearly frightened to death.
The doctor was sent for by the ladies,
and they spoke of the most awful appar-itions.
After this, the head of the family and three constables, from the little market
town, spent a day and a night there.
They held their tongues; but those who saw them next knew they had been well frightened and the man put the place into the market at once.

Lawyer Tantivy privately told people that only a coward would have been frightened by rats in an old wall, and he sold the property to a city man.
Much the same thing happened, but the house was not sold again.
The city man went elsewhere, and tried
in vain to get rid of his bargain.
It was let for the summer once, but the people did not stay a week.
After a while, nobody would farm the ground.
Some said they saw a woman with her throat cut; some that they saw a man with a wound in his breast; some both.
Voices were heard; hands were felt,
and there, when I came to the place, the old house stood, with moths and spiders
for its only tenants.
I went up and looked at it, and then I talked to Jane.
She had not a bit of superstition in her,
and she agreed to what I proposed.
I went to old Tantivy, and offered him a hundred a year for five years' lease of the place, the five hundred to be paid in one sum.
"After that," said I, "I'll give you two thousand for the property. Wife and I are not afraid of ghosts."
The old lawyer shook his head.
"You say you've met with losses," said
he, "and have just six hundred dollars left? Keep it. You couldn't live in that house one week. I've tried it. I'd make a bargain with a rich man, but I'm not rascal enough to take a poor man's all."
"I'll risk it," said I. I do it freely, but the papers must be made out fair and square—two thousand after my five years'
lease."
And so I had my way.
Jane and I went up to the house next day.
It was a wonderful, grand, dirty old place.
We set to work to clean it—to drive out
the insects and the rats; we got some fresh straw to sleep on, for the beds were all mouldering away.
That night at nine we lay down, with a lamp burning, and went to sleep like two tops; and I think it must have been twelve o'clock or nigh to it, when Jane shook me violently.
I started up, and holding each other's hands we both saw what had frightened her.
A man stood near the bed, a young man,
with fair hair curling about his temples;
his breast was bare, and we saw a great
bleeding wound there.
I had my pistol under my pillow, and I drew it out and looked at him.
"Away you go, or I fire," I said; "I'm not a fool to be tricked in this way."
Instead of obeying, he slow moved towards the bed.
Jane shrieked, and drew the counter-
pane over her head.
I covered him with my pistol.
"One step more, and I fire," I said.
He took the step.
I fired.
A shriek of laughter followed and there was no one there.
I arose and searched the place.
Every window was barred, every door locked.
I unlocked one of the doors and entered the adjoining room.
A great bed, with tester and canopy,
stood there, and upon this lay the figure of a woman, all in white, covered with blood.
I rushed towards it, lamp in hand.
Again those hollow shrieks of laughter,
and nothing but the stained and yellow ticking of an old feather bed lay under the canopy.
"Luke! Luke!" screamed my wife, who had followed me, clinging to my arm. "It is all true. Let us leave the place."
"Jane," said I, "it seems to be true that this place is haunted, but we have risked our all on it. The things we have seen have not hurt us, and I propose to drive them away. I'll take you to the village, if you like, and leave you there to live, but here

I stay till I beat these ghosts."
"Not alone," said Jane; and she did not leave me.
If you believe me, day, and night for three weeks we were haunted as people never were before—face, voices, hands—in the house or in the field; and worse than all, we grew ill.
I sent for the doctor, who would'nt
come, and we went to him.
"You are poisoned," he said. "What have you eaten, or what have you been drinking?"
We thought it over, and I told him that we knew of nothing harmful and that we cooked and prepared all of our own food.
"I never knew anyone to pass a day at that confounded house you live in without being affected in this way," said he; even those who did not eat there. Constable Collins says he touched nothing but cold water, and he came to me nearly dying."
"It's the well, then," said I.
"They used to call it the best well in the country," said the doctor.
"It has a nasty, taste now," said I. "I'll beg water from my neighbor until I've cleaned it out."
And that day I began.
We got better slowly, and I tried to hire
two farm-laborers to help me with my
well.
Not one would come.
I was almost tired of living as I did, and feeling like a maniac; and one day I went to the well, and sat there, wondering whether it might not be best to give up and go somewhere as a farm-laborer, when I felt what seemed to be an icy hand on my head, and looking up saw my two ghosts,
side by side.
They were horrible enough, I can tell you and they looked at me and pointed into the well; and then I heard two voices crying:
"Get us out! Get us out! Get us out and bury us! The water is cold, and our wounds are deep. Get us out!"
And then the truth came to me, goodness knows how.
I was just able to crawl over to my neighbor's house, and I said to him:
"Mr. Jarvis, will you send one of your men to the authorities and have the police sent up to my place? There's something in my well that ought not to be there."
Well, they came, and I was right.
They took out of that well two bodies,
rolled up in sheet lead.
By bits of jewelry, and things of that sort, they found out that they were the bodies of the young wife of the old proprietor and the young man who used to run after her.
The old man had killed them both, but he must have had help to bury them in their lead coffins.
And now people began to remember how two plumbers, who had a good deal of this sheet lead in their shop, grew suddenly well off, and went from the place
about the time the old man sold the estate,
and they believed that he had paid them
for helping him to dispose of the bodies.
They were buried in the graveyard, and Jane and I never saw the ghosts again.
The farm land and summer visitors brought me the price I had agreed upon for the place, and I've been a prosperous man ever since.

It is the general impression in the Treasury Department that the Attorney General will decide that the banks are entitled to rebate or remission of the taxes on capital and deposits for the current half year.

THE American Register says: There are not more than a dozen articles of commerce protected by the British revenue code, and practical free trade obtains in that country. The cost of everything used and consumed by toiling people is thus made the least possible, and the rate of wages paid is an average of fifty per cent. higher than in any European country, and in all these the policy of protection is almost as violently enforced as in the United States. Population is much denser and competition among laborers much stronger in England than here; but protectionists here suggest no method of protecting American labor against home or foreign competition. If a commodity manufactured here be protected and its price advanced, and its production stimulated, labor imported to keep down the cost of production, and the employer pockets the sum added by the government to the price of the commodity. In other words, the tariff code simply taxes every consumer for the exclusive benefit of the capitalist, paying into the United States Treasury about one-sixth of the sum thus legislated out of the pockets of the people. In other words, the people, under the tariff method of supporting the government, are taxed annually twelve hundred millions in order to pay into the treasury two hundred millions. Therefore the masses of the unprotected toiling people are, and ought to be free traders. They cannot see why they are to be ruthlessly plundered that a government-instituted nobility may be aggrandized.

THE following notice of the death of Mrs. John Cadwallader, who formerly lived in this city and had many friends here, is from the Indianapolis Saturday Review:

A despatch was received on Thursday night by Mr. John Cadwallader, the well-known photographer, stating that his wife, Mrs. Amelia B. Cadwallader, had died suddenly of apoplexy in the sanitarium at Battle Creek, Michigan, where she has been for some time, receiving treatment for rheumatism. Mrs. Cadwallader was a lady of more than ordinary ability and excellence of character. She was interested in the suffrage movement, and worked for it whenever her health, which was delicate, permitted.

JUDGING by the bill of fare which we have just received from the popular hotel the Crawford House at Cincinnati, it is certainly a good place to stop at. The table at this hotel is a leading feature and in point of variety and excellence second to none in the city. Kentuckians, who desire solid comfort when they go to Cincinnati, will do well to stay at the Crawford House. Mr. Lewis Vanden, the proprietor is a Kentuckian himself and understands how to entertain people from his State.

Street Railroad.

The Maysville Street Railroad and Transfer Company has so far completed its organization, secured the necessary rights of way and obtained estimates of the cost of building the same, that the members feel confident the road can and will be built—and that too by the 10th of June next—provided the citizens of Maysville, all of whom are interested in the success of the enterprise, will come forward and assist.

The Lexington road, which is three and a quarter miles in length, was completed in running order at a cost of $35,000. The road in this city can be built for about $30,000. In order to secure this sum the citizens of Maysville are asked to subscribe two thirds of the above amount. No part of this subscription by the citizens is to go into the hands of the company until the road is completed and the cars running, but it is to be deposited in one of the banks in installments as the building of the road progresses. When the road is finished and the cars running, this subscription money is to be paid over to the company, which will, on receipt of same, issue to the subscribers bonds payable in twenty years, with six per cent. semi-annual interest, secured by first mortgage on all the company's property. The amount necessary for equipping the road &c. &c., is to be paid by the stock holders.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mr. Charles Osborne, of Tuckahoe, is so ill that his friends despair of his recovery.

Miss Cova Bacon has gone to Catlettsburg to attend Mrs. N. S. Williams' school.

Mrs. Sam. Riley and her interesting children, returned home yesterday, after spending several days with relatives at Mayslick.

The many friends of Mrs. C. Keys will be pained to learn that she grows gradually weaker and that very little hope is entertained of her recovery.

Miss Anna B. Dickson, daughter of Mr. William B. Dickson, of this county, will be married at the family residence on the 15th inst., to Mr. Charles Galbraith, of Bracken county.

The entertainment at the residence of Mr. Jacob A. Slack, on the evening of the 16th inst., will be merely a social gathering of the young folks of the neighborhood and not a mask ball as some persons understand.

The Retail Sale of Tobacco by Farmers.

The provisions of the new Internal Revenue and Tariff law in regard to farmers selling by retail, tobacco of their own production, are given as follows:

"Sec. 2. Provided, that farmers and producers of tobacco may sell at the place of production tobacco of their own growth and raising at retail directly to consumers, to an amount not exceeding $100 annually.

"Sec. 3. That hereafter the special tax of a dealer in manufactured tobacco shall not be required from any farmer, planter or lumberman who furnishes such tobacco as rations or supplies to his laborers or employees in the same manner as other supplies are furnished by him to them: Provided, That the aggregate of tobacco so by him furnished shall not exceed in quantity one hundred pounds in any one special tax year; that is from the first day of May in any year: And provided further, That such farmer, planter or lumberman shall not be, at the time he is furnishing such supplies engaged in the general business of selling dry goods, groceries, or other similar supplies in the manner of a merchant or storekeeper to others than his own employees or laborers."

ACROSS THE RIVER.

LITTLE THREE MILE, OHIO.

We presume that work will again be resumed shortly upon the bridge, as it was to have been sold by the 8th.

Some of our farmers have been burning their tobacco beds, with the expectation of planting a large acreage.

W. H. Palmer, who has been quite ill with the fever is we are glad to state improving slowly.

Miss Durrum, a charming young lady of Aberdeen, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Campbell.

Mr. Flaughter, a tobacco merchant of Manchester was in our midst last week, but whether he made any purchases or not we did not learn.

Mr. Clinton Grimes is still shipping apples; he sells them rapidly at $1.80 per bushel.

Joseph Mitchell has moved into his property recently purchased from Mr. Thomas Goldsberry.

Mr. B. C. Bradford is building a nice piece of plank fence. He is not very much in favor of wire fencing.

The Rev. E. B. Hill, a former resident of this place is with us again, for a short time; the old gentleman is very feeble.

Mr. T. B. Ellis and his force are doing an excellent job on his new road.

Hardin Bradley will leave us in few days, he goes on the farm of Alexander Stewart, of Brown county. Hardin we will miss you. K. V.

WIT AND WISDOM.

—In a village near Cork, a physician was disturbed one night by repeated tapings at his door, and on getting up he found a laboring man. "Have you been here long?" asked the doctor. "Indeed I have," answered the caller. "Why didn't you ring the bell?" "Can, because I was afraid of disturbing your honor!" —N. Y. Herald.

—A smart young man asked a gentleman from Cape Cod: "What's the difference between you and a clam?" thinking that the Cape Codger would say he didn't know, and then the young man would pity him for not being able to see any difference between himself and a clam, but the thing didn't work. The Codger took the young man and swept a path across the street with him, and then, after crowding him into an empty fish-barrel, and yanking him out again, said: "A clam wouldn't be playing with you in this way. That's the difference between me and a clam." The young man had no more questions to ask. —New Haven Register.

—The Ass and the Cat: An Ass one day observed a Cat ascend a Tree to escape from a Dog, and a Bright Idea entered his head. A Reminiscence of Artemus Ward.

A gentleman writes to the Providence (R. I.) Sunday Star, giving some reminiscences of a day which Artemus Ward spent in New London, Conn., in 1861. He says of the day after the lecture:

"The following morning was as rare and sunny as was Artemus himself. He could not resist an invitation to visit the 'Young Ladies' High School.' While walking to the academy, a street runaway occurred. A terrified horse went tearing over the pavement, with what Artemus called 'the forequarters' of a wagon clattering at his heels. This incident Artemus ingeniously utilized in his address. 'The vehicular elopement which has just taken place, young ladies, has furnished us with a timely topic of discourse. Young ladies' seminaries are ever exposed to run-aways. Once when traveling with my show, I came upon a female institute. There were ladders, and lads, too, as to that, at every window: manly perpendiculars carrying fainting horizontals to the ground. 'Fire!' I shouted. 'None of that,' replied a solemn voice from the orchard. 'There ain't no fire; these are only young fellows running off with their sweet-hearts.' There is moral entertainment for man and beast in this runaway. No horse, if attached to a wagon, that is, if sincerely attached to it, will run away with it, but the more a young man is attached to a young woman the more he will run away with her, leaving no traces, in fact none of the harness, behind. Young ladies; since I have stood before your beautiful faces I have lost something, and if you or the boy that sweeps out should find a red object, looking like a coral breast-pin that has been stepped on, you may know it is my poor busted heart."

NOTICE.

IT having been asserted that I am preparing to move to the country and give up my interest in the Sewing Machine business, I take this method of announcing to my friends and the public that there is not a word of truth in it except that I will move my family to the country but will continue to sell the OLD RELIABLE SINGER at the same place, second street, opposite postoffice, and run my wagons in the country as heretofore. Competitors please notice the above. I am thankful to the public for the large patronage I have received for the past nine years, and respectfully solicit a share in the future. Jan2d&w3m G. A. Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
Messrs. J. C. Ayer & Co., Gentlemen:
Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.
Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.
